SPOTLIGHT ON STUDENTS

Judith Gomez - USAC Spain

In fall 2010 Communications major Judith Gomez studied in Madrid at the Universidad Rey Juan Carlos. Courses she completed will count toward her minor in Spanish. Her study abroad experience also resulted in several discoveries: she became more independent and learned the benefits of public transportation; her love of languages blossomed and she plans to add French and Italian to her language skills; and she was offered a marketing job after graduation through a contact she made in Spain.

Judith had been thinking about an international study experience for some time and was saving for it. Her financial aid award helped to support the experience. She advises fellow students to "start saving the minute you even think of wanting to study abroad and read the travel books." During your time abroad "try not to hang out with other students in the program ...get a full experience by making friends from your host country."

She comments, "Spaniards display a love for life and socializing; I think it is very different from the way a lot of people live here. No matter how busy they are, they make time to go out and enjoy the city."

SPOTLIGHT ON STUDENTS

Kayleigh Raciak - USAC Australia

About her experience in Australia last spring Kayleigh says "if I could do it again, I would in a heart beat." Kayleigh was assisted by her CSUDH advisor in selecting several courses at Deakin University, (Melbourne) that counted toward her major, criminal justice.

Kayleigh at Sydney Harbour Bridge

One course "Australia Today" helped her appreciate the host country and recognize parallels between the histories of her host country and the U.S. She says Australians are "welcoming and curious...they are down to earth, kind and helpful. I was very comfortable around locals; it was much like it is in Southern California (I think it's the beach)."

Milton Bhoorquez - CSU IP South Korea

When he heard about CSUDH study abroad programs from an announcement in his Toro email, Milton Bhoorquez headed straight to the study abroad office (IEC). He selected the CSU International Program at Yonsei University in Seoul.

As an international business major, Milton understands the importance of study abroad for his career. "With saturated markets and a down-sloping economy in the U.S., having knowledge of another language and culture will increase how marketable I can be." (cont'd side 2)

INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION CENTER NEWSLETTER SPRING 2011

Milton Bhoorquez (cont'd from side 1)

Milton recommends that CSUDH promote international study opportunities more widely on campus and in the community through announcements on its main web site and through other promotional campaigns. It is important, he believes, that the public know CSUDH encourages students to participate in international programs.

Milton found the people in South Korea to be very kind. They assisted him with activities of daily life such as finding markets to shop for food; this helped him economize, and learn about the local color.
