CSUDH Model for Determining Eligibility for Emergency Financial Aid Grant Funding

Funding Methodology - Following guidance from the Department of Education and CSU Chancellor's Office, CSUDH established three operational principles to guide the distribution of these grants:

- Student Success—to help alleviate financial distress students are experiencing due to COVID-19 pandemic.
 - Equity—all students have experienced some type of impact due to COVID-19 pandemic, but those impacts have been uneven, with greater negative impacts on students from historically underserved communities. Students should receive different levels of grant aid proportional to their financial difficulty.
 - Timeliness and administrative simplicity—ensure access for the greatest number of deserving students possible to receive emergency aid as needed, with minimal administrative processes.
- CSUDH considered currently enrolled undergraduate, graduate and professional students who are eligible to receive federal financial aid for an emergency grant using the funds provided through the Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (HEERF). Specifically, students enrolled full-time and part-time are eligible.
 - Per federal guidance, students enrolled exclusively in an online program prior to March 13, 2020, international and undocumented students are not eligible for HEERF emergency grants and were excluded from the Spring 2020 enrollment population.
 - Students with the lowest income status who received maximum levels of state and/or federal financial aid and students with some financial need who received some state and/or federal financial aid were separated into Tier I and Tier II groupings. Using the Free Application for Federal Student Aid calculated Expected Family Contribution was used to group students into levels of financial need.
