- ✓ Dynamic & interactive training methods

The College of Extended and International Education is one of the university's outreach tools to link California State University, Dominguez Hills to the diverse world communities. Our mission is to reach out to the world communities to share in their economic, cultural and social development. We believe such efforts benefit not only the communities we serve, but also the University.

In particular, our International Training Program provides a wide range of services and information for diverse audiences that include government officials, business executives, scholars, and students. We can customize a variety of academic programs, including classroom instruction, field visitations, internships and professional appointments.

The training programs build cultural and business bridges between the US, California, and China and foster increased exchange between organizations and individuals in economic, governmental, academic, and civic sectors. To ensure the success of our programs, we work closely with our university faculty and with expert professionals in California companies and government agencies at the state, county, city, and national levels.

ESL & American Summer Camp

The College of the Extended & International Education at California State University, Dominguez Hills offers an integrated program that combines language instruction, conversational activities, computer training and recreational activities into one fun-filled learning experience.

Our English as a Second Language (ESL) and American Culture Camp gives students ages ten to eighteen the opportunity to increase their skill level to comfortably communicate in English, while learning American history, government and culture. Students also benefit by experiencing college life in a beautiful academic setting.

Students can observe classes and tour the campus, visit school TV studio, have on-camera interview experience, communicate with the teachers and students and have a more comprehensive understanding of the diverse American high school life. All instructors have a minimum of a Master's Degree in TEFL/TESOL, Applied Linguistics, or in a closely related field. All have many years of teaching experience either in the Program here or at an equivalent program in another university or private institution.

Students who successfully complete the ESL & American Culture Camp will receive a certificate of participation.
