Multilingualism and Your Teen

Presenters: Sergio Diaz, Ryoma Ishii, Robert Mosley, Jean Pickard, Zack Stroud

Faculty Mentor: Susan Needham

Class: ANT312 Language & Culture

Stand out with your own multilingual style

“Do you want to end up monolingual like your friends?”

Talk to your teen today about learning a second language.

Parents, according to the National Education Association, “multilingual proficiency strengthens how the brain functions” and is associated with more cognitive flexibility, better problem-solving skills, a “superior” working memory, academic success, and more...

In addition, being Multilingual reduces linguistic discrimination by opening the door to opportunities and new cultures.

For more information about multilingualism and how it can help your teen visit www.melts.org, or www.warmcam.org.