Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at California State University Dominguez Hills (OLLI @ CSUDH) is one of 124 lifelong learning programs on university and college campuses across the country, funded in part by a generous endowment from the Bernard Osher Foundation and the in-kind support from the College of Extended and International Education.

OLLI @ CSUDH is an organization of lifelong learners who want to continue enhancing their lives through education with vibrant minds and boundless curiosity. Members discover, share, and build social connections in a rich learning culture through various exciting and thought-provoking short courses taught by CSUDH professors and other local professionals. Subject areas include literature, history, science, and the arts. Special events like wine tastings, theater performances, and trips to museums and other local attractions are temporarily on hold until we can meet again in person.

Volunteers are our life-blood! OLLI at CSUDH is a volunteer driven organization whose success is largely due to the contributions of its members. Volunteering creates a more vibrant learning community and connects you to other OLLI members. Let us know if you can help in any of the following ways, and we will contact you to discuss the opportunity in more detail. Visit our website for more information: www.csudh.edu/olli or www.facebook.com/olli or https://bit.ly/csudhyoutubedchannel
