Project Learning from an International Student’s Perspective

Presenters: Alan Couto
Mentors: Dr. Nancy Deng, Dr. Sheng Yi

The objective of our project is to build and strengthen students’ digital competence in using Microsoft Excel for data organization, visualization, and analysis. Our project team of two faculty mentors and four student trainers designed and presented a campus-wide Excel Skills Training Workshop to 275 CSUDH students in three live sessions (via Zoom) on March 12 & 13, 2021. This presentation includes a summary of the project activities, my expectation for the project, the important skills I learned, the collaboration among my project team members, the influence of this project experience on my academic interests and/or professional career, and my understanding of community engagement and service learning. I truly believe that our Workshop was a great asset to all students, not only because of the technical skills presented but also because it was something that other students could relate to. Students showed more willingness to learn, to participate and to get involved since the presenters were also students.

Presentation Video: Project Learning from an International Student’s Perspective