

Human Services

Bachelor of Arts

1. Display ability to assess, plan, implement and evaluate human services as they apply to target populations of individuals, groups and organizations.
2. Use psychological, sociological, behavioral theory concepts and models to promote prevention, maintenance, rehabilitation and healthy human functioning.
3. Access, interpret and present research findings to clients colleagues or other members of related service fields
4. Critically examine how historical and current political, legislative and economic climate impacts the practice of human services
5. Apply ethical and professional standards to the practice of human services.
6. Demonstrate ability to affect social change through advocacy work at all levels of society
7. Integrate cultural values, knowledge and practice skills
8. Apply theory to practice as change agents for the advancement of health, well-being, and social justice among diverse individuals, groups, and populations locally and globally.
9. Demonstrate cultural competence in addressing health disparities among diverse populations in urban and rural settings locally and globally.